President Bush declares Hispanic Heritage Month

Throughout our history, America has been a land of diversity and has benefited from the contributions of people of different backgrounds brought together by a love of liberty. During National Hispanic Heritage Month, we celebrate the achievements of Hispanic Americans and the significant role they have played in making out Nation strong, prosperous, and free.

The contributions of Hispanic Americans have made a positive impact on every part of our society. Americans of Hispanic decent are astronauts and athletes, doctors and teachers, lawyers and scientists. The vibrancy of our Nation's Hispanic performers enriches music, dancing, and the arts. Hispanic Americans serve at every level of government, including as Attorney General of the United States and Secretary of Commerce. Latino entrepreneurs are starting and growing businesses all across America, creating job opportunities. The hard work and determination of Hispanic Americans continue to inspire all those who dream of a better life for themselves and their families.

Our Nation's Hispanic community has contributed to the advance of freedom abroad and to the defense of freedom at home. In every generation, Hispanic Americans have served valiantly in the United States military. Today there are more than 200,000 Hispanic Americans serving in the Armed Forces, and our Nation is grateful for their courage and sacrifice. In addition, thousands of Hispanic Americans are helping to defend and protect our homeland by serving as police officers and firefighters. All Americans are thankful for their daily work in helping to keep our Nation safe.

During National Hispanic Heritage Month, we join together to recognize the proud history and rich culture of Hispanic Americans. To honor the achievements of Hispanic Americans, the Congress, by Public Law 100 402, as amended, has authorized and requested the President to issue annually proclamation designating September 15 through October 15 as "National Hispanic Heritage Month."

Now, therefore, I, George W. Bush, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim September 15 through October 15, 2005, as National Hispanic Heritage Month. I call upon public officials, educators, librarians, and all the people of the United States to observe this month with appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this sixteenth day of September, in our year of our Lord two thousand five, and the independence of the United States of America the two hundred and thirteenth.

George W. Bush,
President of the United States of America

This year's National Hispanic Heritage Month's theme is "Hispanic Americans: Strong and Colorful Threads in the American Fabric," and it pays tribute to the millions of United States residents from Hispanic descent.

Hispanic Marines and sailors here are brought together in celebration of their culture and upbringing.

Recognized annually since 1988, National Hispanic Heritage Month, Sept 15- Oct 15, is a time for Americans to educate themselves about the influences Hispanic culture has had on today's society.

Maj. Gen. Richard N. Natonski, 1st Marine Division

commanding general, said the contributions of our Hispanic American brothers and sisters in arms has greatly added to the to Corps' illustrious history.

"The Marine Corps' cultural diversity is a force multiplier on the field of battle, and Hispanic Americans have proven themselves time and time again on the battlefield. From the battle fields of the American Revolution to the deserts of Iraq and Afghanistan, Hispanic Americans have shown great courage and selfless dedication to our nation and its freedoms," said Maj. Gen. Natonski.

Marines here contend that people of different cultures working together makes the Marine Corps the warm melting pot it is today.

Book signing

Retired Col. Wesley L. Fox, author of “Marine Rifleman,” will hold a book signing at the depot command museum gift shop today from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. For more information, contact Joanna McDonald at (619) 524 –6038. Fox will also attend Company M’s recruit graduation as the parade’s reviewing officer.

Assist recruiters in Pa.

Recruiting Stations in Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, Pa., need Marines to serve as recruiter assistants. Additionally, this duty can help Marines earn points toward promotion. For more information about the program, contact Gunnery Sgt. Bruce G. Benkart at (412) 395-6355 or Gunnery Sgt. Derrick B. Jones at (717) 770-6637.

Boot Camp Challenge

The public is invited to run the depot’s fourth annual Boot Camp Challenge Oct. 1.

Participants can enter as individuals, or they can sign up in three- or five-person teams to run a three-mile run that includes the same obstacles Marine recruits use.

Go to www.bootcampchallenge.com to register, or call (619) 524-6058 or (619) 524-0548.

Depot DI reunion

Drill instructors, past and present, are invited to attend the MCRD San Diego Drill Instructors Reunion Oct. 20-22. For more information, please call Sgt. Maj. Terry T. Hoskins, (619) 524-4317, or write to terry.hoskins@usmc.mil.

Other contacts are Sgt. Maj. Randall Carter, (619) 524-1776, randall.carter@usmc.mil; and Sgt. Maj. Frank E. Pulley, (619) 524-8706, frank.pulley@usmc.mil.

Enlisted ball plans underway

The Sheraton San Diego Hotel & Marina on Harbor Island Drive will host this year’s depot celebrations of the Marine Corps birthday. An enlisted ball coordinated by Sgt. Maj. Daniel Anderson will be held Nov. 10. A staff noncommissioned officer ball coordinated by Sgt. Maj. Terry Hoskins will be held Nov. 12.

For more information, please contact your unit representative or call Hoskins at (619) 524-4317 or Anderson at (619) 524-1984.

Marines Hymn playing after Morning Colors

The Marines Hymn now follows Colors each morning on the depot public-address system.

“Carry on” will follow the hymn. As is customary, Marines always terminate their salutes on the last note of music for Colors. As a show of respect, service members and others should stand at the position of attention for the playing of the Marines Hymn and until “Carry on” sounds.

To date, 41 Hispanic Americans have received the Medal of Honor. Thirteen Hispanic Medal of Honor recipients are Marines ranging from private to major.

“In boot camp, when they are talking about Medal of Honor recipients, all you hear is names and you see faces. You don’t care what race they are,” said Padilla. “We’re all equal. What does color matter when I’m in combat? Just because he’s yellow, brown, white or black; it doesn’t mean you can’t depend on him. He’s still got your back.”

Hispanic Heritage Month begins September 15, the anniversary of independence for five Latin American countries –Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua. In addition, Mexico declared its independence on Sept. 16, and Chile on Sept. 18, according to the Infoplease Hispanic Heritage Month Web site.

The observation was initiated in 1968 as National Hispanic Heritage Week, but it was expanded in 1988 to include the entire 31-day period.

“It’s diversity of our culture that makes the Marine Corps so strong. We treat everybody equally based on their ability and performance,” said Gunnery Sgt. E.W. Seaward, administrative chief.

A native of Waukegan, Ill., near Chicago, Lance Cpl. Robert Padilla, administrative clerk, said he is grateful for his heritage, and he believes being a Hispanic Marine is just like being a Marine of any other race.

“I learned a lot about my heritage just from schools spending so much time teaching about Hispanic culture,” he said.

The month was originally created to encourage educators and counselors to expand the subjects they taught and make the classrooms more diverse.

“I grew up in a mixed community, predominately black. Even before the Marine Corps, I was always taught that color and race wasn’t how a person was judged. It was always performance and ability,” said Padilla.

Marines and civilian employees from Marine Corps Recruit Depot San Diego enjoyed a weekend at Petco Park Sept. 17 and 18.

The San Diego Padres donated tickets to the United Services Organization to distribute to service members and their families.

“It was nice to get to go to a baseball game. Its not Yankee Stadium like I’m used to, but getting to go to a baseball game courtesy of the military was cool,” said Lance Cpl. Junior A. Caba, post office clerk.

Saturday’s game was the first time the Washington Nationals visited Petco Park. This was also the first time Lance Cpl. Randall L. Blankenship, armory staff, had been to a professional baseball game. The Martinsville, Ind., native is not an avid baseball fan, but he went to spend time with friends.

“Saturday’s game was not as cool as Sunday’s,” said Blankenship. “Sunday’s game was better; we walked around and took in the sights and sounds of the ballpark. The Padres also played a great game.”

The Padres won Saturday’s game, beating the Nationals 8-5 with dramatic offensive play, and they won Sunday’s game in a 2-1 squeaker.

Drinking and driving still a Corps problem

by Sgt. Roe Seigle
contributing writer

We have all heard the issue on drinking and driving more than 100 times, but apparently, it is not sinking into the thick skulls of some Marines.

Every Friday I tell my Marines that drinking and driving is stupid. It’s just something that we, as Marines, hear every weekend during a safety brief. You would think that if we are smart enough to navigate on a battlefield, we should be smart enough to understand such a simple order.

However, this very weekend it is likely a Marine will get behind the wheel of a vehicle, while intoxicated, after being told not to do so in a safety brief by his superior. According to the Provost Marshal’s Office, it is mostly males below the rank of sergeant and also below the age of 25 that think they are not going to get caught. Despite seemingly popular opinion, you are not Superman just because you had a few shots of whiskey. If anything, you are now even more stupid than you were before you started drinking that poison.

Recently, I was out in Oceanside seeing a movie and having a good time without getting liquored up. I noticed two obviously drunk Marines stumble out of a bar and get into the passenger side of a four-door truck. I sat for two minutes, and low and behold, here comes some other wasted Marine fumbling his keys around and getting into the driver’s side of the truck.

I tried talking to this moron, but he was in what I call the “invisible and invincible stage” of being drunk. I tried talking sense to this genius without getting abrasive, but he insisted that even though he smelled like a brewery, he was just fine to drive.

After trying to deter this idiot and attempting to block his truck, the 150-pound knucklehead threatened to “slam” me, at 205 pounds, then sped off, putting everyone in the vehicle with him in danger, as well as all of the innocent people on the road.

So, he got away, but I am sure he will do it again, and eventually get caught.

There is something that 90 percent of these drunks have in common when they are busted by the cops. They all claim to have had only “a couple” drinks.

They can be so drunk they can barely talk, but somehow they got that drunk off of a couple of drinks. I guess the half of a keg they drank was one drink, and the half bottle of liquor they had with it was the other drink.

Listen Marines, I don’t care if you had one drink, or 20 drinks. You do not get behind the wheel after drinking alcohol. It is not that hard to understand. You are not invincible and even though you feel fine and think you do not appear drunk, other people, such as law enforcement, can tell you are drunk.

There is only so much that can be done to prevent Marines from driving drunk. It is ultimately in the hands of the individual Marine that knows he is going to go out and consume alcohol.

Is it really worth the risk? Is it really worth getting arrested, paying fines, having to go to court, losing your driving privileges, possibly dying over or becoming a murderer when you kill an innocent person with your stupidity?

No, it is not Marines. So just don’t do it.

LIFE AS A BOOT Low on the totem, but it’s not all bad

by Pfc. Kaitlyn M. Scarboro
Chevron staff

I don’t even rate to wear my little blue ribbon yet. You know, the one you get after being in the fleet for 60 days. I haven’t even reached the end of my first enlisted year.

According to my friends, I was just recently promoted from shower shoe to go-faster.

I like being considered overly motivated and perky. I enjoy ‘oorahs’ and ‘devil dogs.’ I still smile at recruits and return their greeting of the day because I remember what it was like to be there “just a few weeks ago.”

My friends around the barracks pick on me when we go out to eat, offering to take me places like Chuck E Cheese’s or McDonald’s so I can play on the little kids toys while they finish their meals.

Being new to the Marine Corps is like being new to the world, fresh out of the womb. You have so much potential and so many opportunities available.

But don’t worry. The wonder and awe of it all fades away quickly. And then you are just another Marine doing your job in the same outfit as everybody else.

But you are still the new guy. As the new guy, you get picked on a bunch. You get sent on gag office supply runs or get stuck taking out the trash every night. You usually get tasked to do the job nobody else wants to do and you are expected to do it with a smile.

It’s the life of the new guy, the green blooded, the boot. It’s not all bad though.

Earning the title Marine is a big accomplishment that hardly goes unnoticed. Despite getting stuck with the dirty work, there is a bond between Marines that can never be broken. You’ve proven yourself loyal to the same cause that millions of other people have turned up their nose at or don’t have enough discipline to pursue.

Not only have you taken the challenge to better yourself, you have overcome all the obstacles and proven yourself dedicated to the protection of your country, Corps and friends.

I came to this realization when I had the opportunity to visit with many Vietnam veterans at a dinner banquet after I had only served a few weeks in the fleet. They served their country and defended the rights of the constitution so I could live my life with the freedoms our forefathers intended. I considered it a great honor to be invited to such an event.

The retirees and veterans, however, expressed to me what an honor it was for them to be in my company. They knew what it took for me to join the Marine Corps. They understood what a compromise it was for me to leave home for the adventures and challenges of the military.

My lack of experience in the military was of no consequence to them. They held me in the highest regard because I joined knowing that sometime soon I could be returning fire in a giant sand box on the other side of the world.

They expressed remorse in the fact that they could not take my place at the battlefields. Some wanted to return to the heat of the battle, and some wanted to protect the young lady standing in front of them from the horrors they couldn’t bear to speak of.

I went to the banquet intending to honor the ladies and gentlemen who had served in a war with my grandfather, a retired Army colonel. Instead, I was honored for being courageous enough to follow in his footsteps.

Being the new guy isn’t all that bad. The trash doesn’t take itself out, that’s for sure. But wearing the uniform of a United States Marine is reward enough, even if it is a little too constricting to climb the rope wall in McDonald’s ball pen.

Service Company won the coveted first place trophy in the Commanding General's Cup soccer playoffs here Tuesday.

The tournament began with Service Co. taking on 12th Marine Corps District in a close game.

Service Co. took the lead early in the game with a score from Staff Sgt. Victor Hernandez.

District answered back with two goals, but lost 4-2. Service Co. managed to clinch the first of two slots for the championship game.

Next, Coast Guard's Maritime Safety and Security team faced off against Consolidated Personnel Administrations Center in an epic struggle for the second seat in the championship game.

The game began in CPAC's favor with an early goal from Cpl. Alfredo Hernandez. CPAC remained in the lead until Petty Officer 2nd Class Sam Wilson scored two consecutive goals to win the game 2-1.

District played CPAC for third place. CPAC started their relentless onslaught early scoring five goals at will and showing District no mercy. District did manage to avoid a shutout scoring a single goal late in the game. CPAC, sore from its earlier loss, won the game 5-1.

In the championship, Service Co. slammed Coast Guard 5-1 for the big trophies.

"It was a team effort," said Service Co.'s Lance Cpl. Oscar Gonzalez-Millan. "Everyone held their positions and didn't lose their cool."

Coast Guard was missing several players who are deployed to help Hurricane Katrina victims.

"The team was tired because they didn't have enough players to cycle through, they have a lot of deployments," said Coast Guard Petty Officer 1st Class Francisco Salgado, MSST personnel.

The next CG's Cup event is sand volleyball, which kicks off this week.

BOWL-ORAMA

Old rivalries flare anew as depot’s annual bowling league rolls on

Beer, bloused bowling shoes and people walking in carrying over-sized hand bags; bowling season has officially begun at the depot recreation center for the depot-sponsored leagues.

Originally scheduled to begin Sept. 7, the season was pushed back a week due to an insufficient amount of participating teams.

There are many promising depot teams this season, but the long time rivals Munson V and the Anti-Munsons are expected to lead the lanes this season, according to seasoned league-veterans.

The Munson V, headed by retired depot chief of staff, Col. Thomas W. Spencer, have, unexpected by most, lost the championships the last three consecutive years but expect to make a triumphant come-back this year, according to Spencer.

Maj. Ronald G. Capes, depot provost marshal and organizer of the Slingblades, referred to a plaque, which is a memorial to Spencer and his bowling legacy, embedded into the bowling lane on which the Munsons played against the Anti-Munsons.

“Col. Spencer’s plaque on the lane did nothing to prevent him from losing,” said Capes shortly before Spencer bowled four strikes in a row, but lost the game to the Anti-Munsons.

The Anti-Munsons, led by Master Gunnery Sgt. Frank R. McCracken, have officially deemed themselves the archrivals of the Munson V.

James P. Macfarlane, a veteran Munson member, attributes the creation of the Anti-Munsons to McCracken’s jealousy. McCracken had originally wanted to be on the Munson team but claims to have been turned down.

Macfarlane disputes the accusation however, stating, “We offered him a spot and a shirt with a name on it – but he didn’t want to be ‘Sheryl.’”

The Munsons weren’t the only team McCracken tried to join which required him to wear women’s clothing. “I tried to get on the District Divas. They wanted me to wear a dress,” he said reluctantly.

Spencer explained that many of the league teams admire the shirts the Munsons adopted during last years’ season. The Munson IV, last year’s team, wore black T-shirts with red and orange flames engulfing the team name while a bowling ball smashes into white bowling pins.

Master Gunnery Sgt. Daniel Bennett spoke of possibilities the Anti-Munsons might get retaliatory T-shirts. “Rumor has it that our shirts will be identical to theirs, but opposite in color.”

With many more available lanes, more teams are encouraged to join the league.

Games are played Wednesday nights in the recreation center at 5:00 free of charge to league members.
